

University of California Santa Barbara Seawater Renewal System

Landscape and hardscape plans for a new seawater pump house. As an important coastal access point for the University and the public, the project incorporates several circulation elements while respecting the program's usage of the Marine Biotechnology Laboratory. Extensive use of coastal zone plants contributes to the overall beauty of the project site and enhances the learning experience.